

About CWSG

The Congressional Women's Softball Game began in 2009, when a Member of Congress wanted to use her own breast cancer diagnosis to empower other young adults affected by the disease and amplify their experiences.

Now, a group of bi-partisan and bi-cameral congressional representatives and the Washington D.C. press corps, often portrayed as bitter rivals, work together to raise funds and awareness for young adults affected by breast cancer.

Together, the players and dedicated volunteers have raised $3.7 million in partnership with the Young Survival Coalition, an organization dedicated to the critical issues unique to young adults affected by breast cancer.

About the charity:

YOUNG SURVIVAL COALITION

Established in 1998, Young Survival Coalition (YSC) is the largest nonprofit dedicated exclusively to young adults diagnosed with breast cancer age 40 and under and their co-survivor support networks. YSC also educates and influences the medical, research and legislative communities to address breast cancer in young adults.

Through educational resources and programming, annual conferences, and local and online support networks, YSC ensures no young adult faces breast cancer alone.

Breast Cancer Facts:

- Breast cancer is the most common cancer in women ages 15 to 39.
- It is estimated that more than 250,000 women diagnosed with breast cancer at age 40 or younger are living in the U.S. today.
- One young woman is diagnosed with breast cancer every 40 minutes.
- Nearly 13,000 young adults will be diagnosed with breast cancer this year.
- Young women are more likely to have aggressive subtypes of breast cancer, including triple negative and HER2+ disease, larger tumor sizes and higher incidence of lymph node involvement.
- Young women face unique challenges such as early onset menopause and infertility, young children still at home, and unique financial challenges as their careers are less established.
